

ABSTRACT

A webbing of a seat belt engages an opening of a seat belt tension sensor. The webbing is bunched or folded so as to prevent rubbing against the sides of the opening in the housing and anchor plate, or an outer surface of the seat belt tension sensor. The webbing is maintained in a bunched or folded state using a set of stitches.